The American Hall of Fame & Museum

The American Hall of Fame & Museum is the Nation's first memorial to honor those law enforcement officers who died in the line of duty. The museum was founded in 1960 in North Port, Florida by Gerald Arenberg. He was a police officer injured in the line by a drunk driver in 1955. It was his dream to build a memorial to honor all law enforcement officers killed in the line of duty - those that paid the ultimate sacrifice to keep the peace, to protect, and to serve. He and his friend Derrick VanBrode IV joined forces in 1959 to promote the museum and its programs.

The museum was moved from North Port to the former FBI building in Miami, Florida in 1990 . This building had 3 floors, housing the museum on the first 2 floors and the administration offices on the 3rd floor. By 2000 this facility became too small to house the growing number of exhibits, as well as the growing number of names in the memorial. That, combined with the changing nature of tourism in Miami, prompted the decision to move the museum once again. In 2001, building began on the museum in Titusville, Florida. This facility opened in May, 2003. The Space Coast area was chosen because of its proximity to the Kennedy Space Center, the Astronauts Hall of Fame, and of course, Orlando.
